Canadian Cedar Wood Upgrade

Hemlock

Cedar

Canadian Hemlock

This strong non-allergenic, non-toxic wood comes standard in all higher end saunas. This is due to its longevity, no-out gassing, as well as its resistance to cracking or warping.

Canadian Cedar

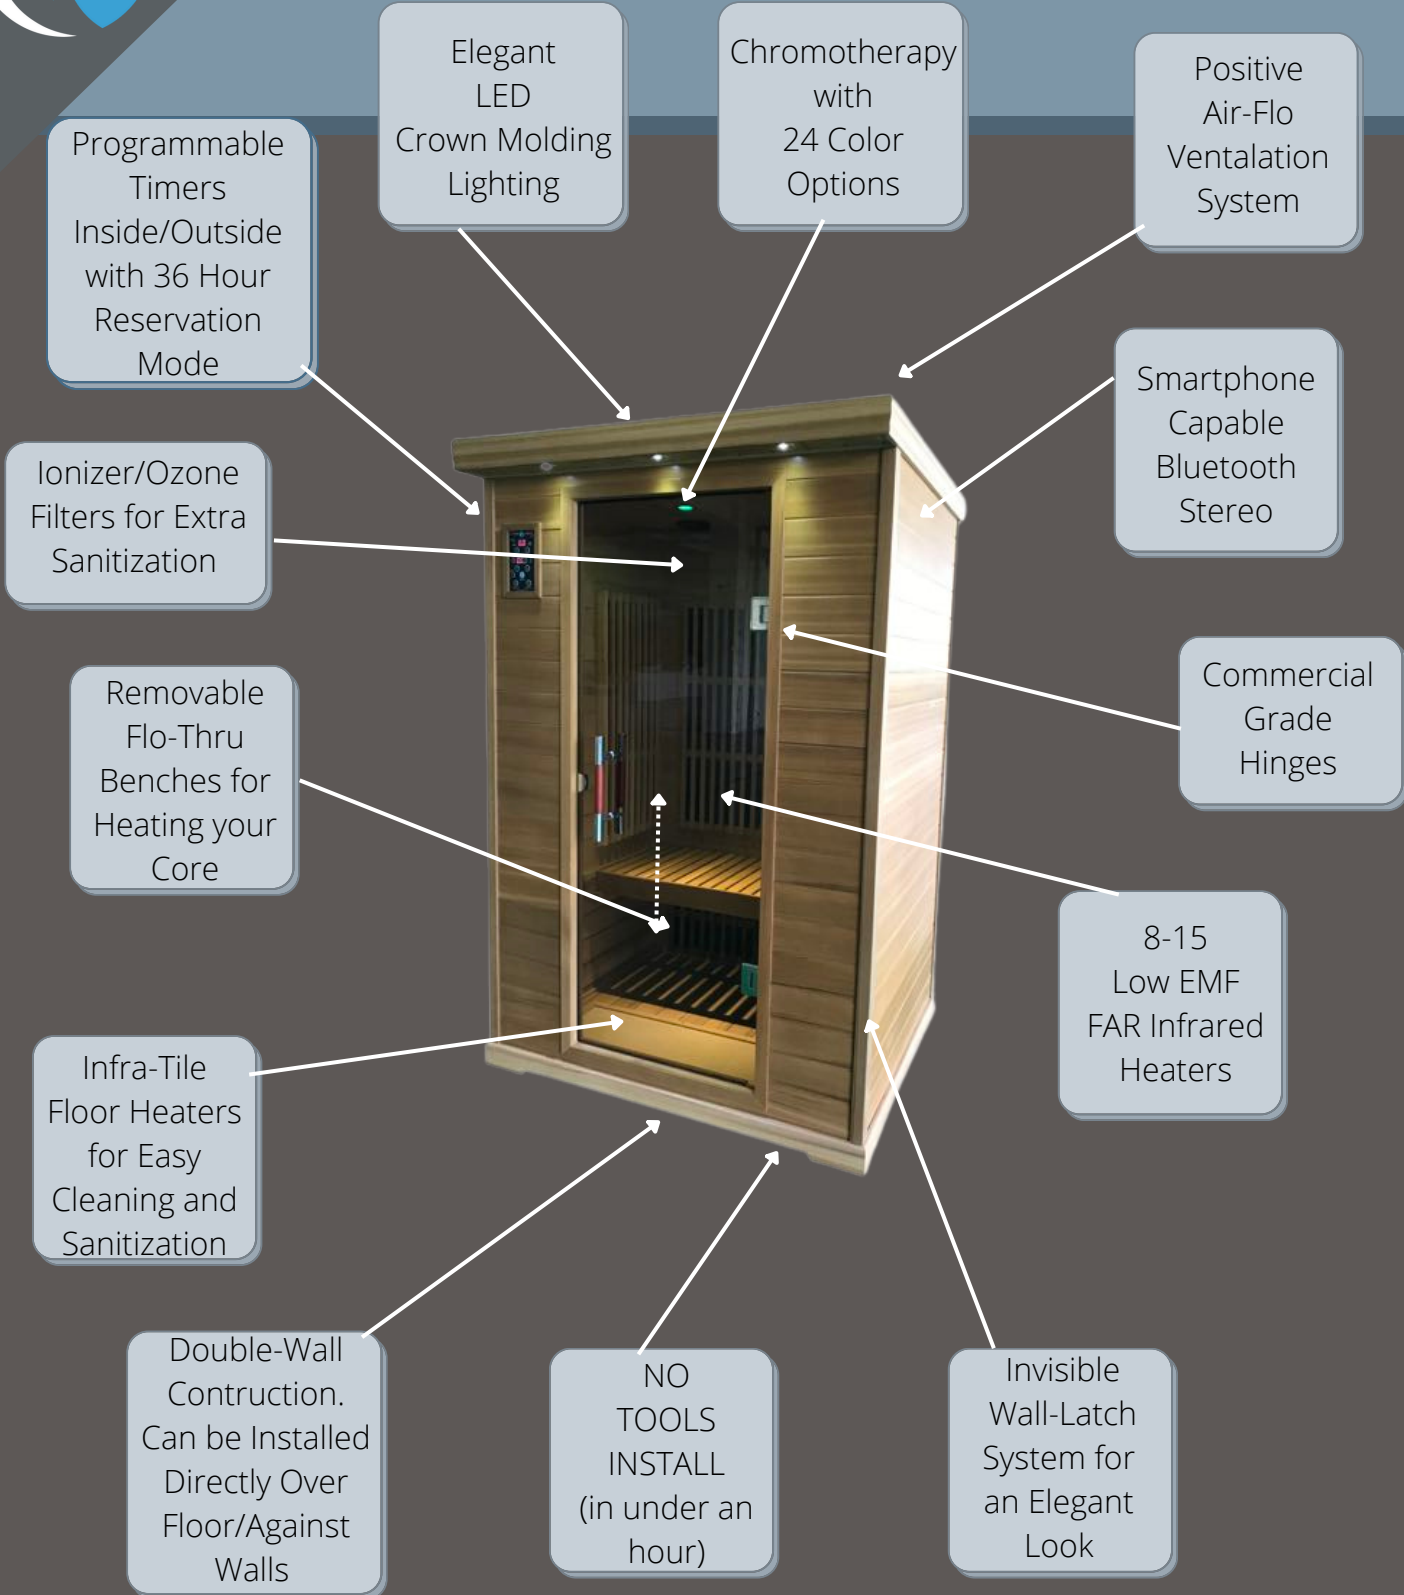

Cedar has been used for centuries in homes and furnishings due to its elegance and resistance to mold, mildew and pests. Its oils have been historically utilized for aroma therapy treatments, perfumes and soaps to name a few. From closets and drawers to dog beds and hamster cages, its ability to resist odors is unsurpassed. I am often asked if it is bad for you or toxic. If you are extra sensitive to the smells in shampoos, soaps, perfumes and candles, the same would apply with cedar and you may opt for the Hemlock wood. Aside from individuals with such sensitivities, cedar is completely safe when cured correctly. I personally love the aroma therapy of the cedar sauna as it fills up my home. That being said, of course it comes down to your individual taste.

The Cedar wood is a reddish brown color and the Hemlock is lighter in color such as Maple or Pine. You may want to consider this if you are trying to match any other furnishings or decor.

If you are putting your sauna in a humid environment or outside, we would strongly recommend Cedar due to its ability to resist moisture. If you are placing it inside, both saunas will perform equally and have the same longevity.

Q. Do I need to have an electrician run a dedicated line?

A. Although it is recommended to run the sauna on it's own line, as long as you are not running any other appliance at the same time as your sauna, it would technically be dedicated (electrical requirements still apply).

Q. How much assembly is required?

A. Your sauna will be completely assembled and tested at our factory. Once it passes our Quality Assurance, we will send the 6 walls (top, bottom, sides, front/back) to our packaging department. You will receive the walls and benches in 3 boxes. Since we have already "pre-built" the unit, installation can usually be done under an hour with 2 people. Basically this requires; putting the 4 walls on the base, the top on, and lastly the benches.

Q. How long does it take to receive my sauna after I order?

A. Your sauna will ship within 2-3 business days and you should receive it within 7-14 business days (every shipper varies on time). The shipper will call in advance to set up an appointment for delivery. If your sauna is back-ordered, you will be given an estimated time/date for delivery.

Q. Can the sauna be moved upstairs/downstairs for installation?

A. Yes, you would just be moving the individual walls up/down one at a time. As a rule-of-thumb, if you can carry a piece of Plywood up/down, the sauna shouldn't be a problem. For extra tight stairs, please call for the exact measurements.

Q. Do the saunas need wall clearance for installation?

A. No. Very little heat will be transferred from inside of the unit so you can install directly against walls. For 2022, all saunas can now be installed from the inside, so no wall clearance is required for installation. Note, the saunas are 75" high and you will need room on top for your hands to connect the heater plugs.

Q. What floor surface is required to install my sauna?

A. Your sauna can be installed on any level surface. Think of it no different than an Armore or large appliance. Note, that if your surface isn't level, you may experience creaking while stepping on the floor, and possibly damage/crack the Infra-Tile™ floor tiles.
